Brill Creative Offering Free Services Through April

Cincinnati, Ohio: Dan Brill, owner and creative director of Brill Creative, announced today the agency would be offering free services to existing restaurant clients, as well as evaluating and providing free services to select new clients on a case-by-case basis through the month of April.

“We are doing this to help offset business hardships resulting from the Coronavirus,” says Brill. “We are very grateful for our many mutually beneficial client-agency relationships, and we feel it is not only the right thing to do, but our responsibility to help businesses to not just survive but thrive through these unprecedented times and circumstances.”

Brill will be providing critical business continuity services, including but not limited to creative and user experience design, content development, advertising and analytics services to its existing clients in Busken Bakery, Dewey’s Pizza and Wild Eggs, and to any business who submits a request and is approved based on the agency’s capacity to service them. Businesses in need should visit brillcreative.com/letushelp to express their interest.

“These are uncertain times, and while we were concentrating on taking care of others, Brill Creative is taking care of us,” says Stephanie McCall, Marketing Director at Dewey’s Pizza. “It was a generous offer and totally unexpected. Dan has been an exceptional partner for the past two years and it’s nice to know he is truly part of our team.”
